This work, while it advocates the car It would have love do the work of hate. It will be marked with the characteristics of the author, so well known to the public by his previous works, of whom it was said in the publication of "The New Purchase." that "He was master of many styles, and had stepped to the highest round at once." The work is no defence of slavery; but it would be a half-arcs-wheel, not to stop, but to concentrate, equalize, and direct other motions. It treats the ultratim of the North to the Lex tationis. The writer wincessed much that he describes, and real persons are introduced under new names, so the work, while it will possess the interest of fiction, is not only true to life, but

The Indian Summer.

There is a time just ere the frost Prepares to pave old Winter's way. When Autumn in a reverie lost. The mellow day-time dreams away; To gaze once more on hill and dell To mark how many sheaves they bind, And see if all is ripened well.

With balmy breath she whispers low-The dying flowers look up and give Their sweetest incense ere they go, For her who made their beauties live. She enters 'neath the wondland shade, Her zephyrs lift the lingering leaf. And bear it gently where are laid The loved and lost ones of its grief.

At last old Autumn, rising, takes Again his sceptre and his throne, With boisterous hands the trees he shakes Intent on gathering all his own. Sweet Summer, sighing, thes the plain, And waiting Winter, gaunt and grim, Lets miser Autumn hoard his grain,
